Brittany has experience in a wide variety of criminal and civil litigations and investigations. She represents corporations, city agencies, and individuals accused of alleged wrongdoing such as fraud, tax evasion, political corruption, and false claims act violations. She has represented individuals and entities across industries, including healthcare, automotive, energy, agriculture, education, and construction.

Brittany has experience in defending clients involved in investigations and enforcement actions conducted by the IRS, SEC, CFTC, FINRA, NTSB, OFAC, State AG offices and other federal and state regulatory agencies. She has a keen understanding of how to handle complex financial matters whether in connection with criminal litigation, civil litigation, or an investigation. She routinely engages with forensic accountants to defend her clients against allegations of tax fraud and tax evasion.

Brittany also litigates a range of complex civil disputes throughout the country, with a focus on cases alleging complicated financial issues.

Brittany spends much of her time working with clients to prepare them for various kinds of court proceedings. She has represented clients in grand jury appearances, proffers, arraignments, pre-trial conferences, as witnesses at trial, sentencings, and other court proceedings.
